Presentation from the Orkney Isles: Surf 'n' Turf Project:

An example of a private and public sector partnership with Tidal Power and Hydrogen fuel production

Home to the globally renowned European Marine Energy Centre and more wind turbines than you can shake a stick at, Orkney residents are presented with a renewable energy conundrum – too much! The Surf 'n' Turf Project, supported by Scottish Government's Local Energy Challenge Fund, seeks to combine wind and tidal electricity surpluses to electrolyse hydrogen from water, utilising it to develop green fuel supplies for the lifeline ferry service from the mainland. Ian Garman of Community Energy Scotland will present, via Skype, an overview of the project's development, the current state of play, and ambitions for the future.

Panel Introductions and Q&A / discussion – 30 mins
